BIS "JOLLY LITTLE GIRL" THE SHARON POISONING.

How Mr. Howe, of Spider Lake, Queb., Extraordinary Evidence of Evans' Lost His Wife. Servant Girl.

NOW HE ASKS $50,000 DAMAGES.

WHAT THE THREE PRISONERS DID.

An Ardent Letter Writer—Old, But Enthusiastic—The Tell-Tale Editor—With a Husband Is "A Champ" and Leaves.

NEW YORK, Feb.

THAMAR HOWE told Judge Ingraham and a jury in Part 3 of the Supreme Court yesterday how he had lost the affection of his pretty little wife.

He said, with a long, slender nose, dark brown hair, a heavy, sandy mustache and a thin, pale complexion, that he was not in court, but his photograph was introduced as evidence to prove that his affection was worth the value of $50,000. She is petite, winsome and, judging from the tone of letters addressed to her, jolly.

Isaac O. Woodruff, who is charged with having wooed her from her home, is elderly, bearded and of imposing mien. He does not look guilty of writing some of the glowing letters credited to his pen which were read to the jury. Here is a specimen that Mr. Woodruff, by the way, denies having written. It was found by Howe in his wife's possession and identified by him as Mr. Woodruff's composition:

ONE OF THE LETTERS.

FEB. 22, 1921.

MY JOLLY LITTLE GIRL—Your good letter of last Monday came duly to hand, and I can assure you it was read to me with great interest. I should have been so glad to hear from you again. I am sure you are a shaking for writing about that little amount. Do not let it bother you. I am sure you are a shaking for writing about that little amount. Do not let it bother you. I am sure you are a shaking for writing about that little amount. Do not let it bother you.

You have no idea, little girl, how much I have missed you, how you think it has been with me. I don't know how to tell you how much I have missed you. I don't know how to tell you how much I have missed you. I don't know how to tell you how much I have missed you.

He had been but 17 years old when Howe led her to the altar of St. Peter's Parish Church, in Lowell, Mass., on October 18, 1897. Mr. Woodruff was a director of the Magnolia Film and Game Club, of Spider Lake, P. Q., where Howe was awarded.

SHE VISITED WOODRUFF'S FAMILY.

Mrs. Howe went to the wife to live with her husband and naturally met the members of the club. She stayed in the house in January, 1921, to pay a visit to Mr. Woodruff's family in this city, and it was after her return that the letter already quoted was received. Letters bearing Mr. Woodruff's signature were sent to her in a different strain and addressed "My dear Mrs. Howe." These missives were read to the jury by Howe's counsel, John Kelly and James Murphy.

Howe's suspicions were first aroused by finding a batch of letters addressed to his wife and violent discussions resulted. When he entered her room one day without warning he saw her throw something into a bureau drawer. He said nothing, but waited for a moment or two and then investigated. It was a letter from Mr. Woodruff. He then went to the Post Office, where the club mail was regularly received, to speak about letters which he had found there. He was in quite a different strain and addressed "My dear Mrs. Howe." These missives were read to the jury by Howe's counsel, John Kelly and James Murphy.

A LETTER FOR MRS. HOWE.

He took it to the club and handed it to his wife. She refused to tell him from whom it came. He said nothing, but waited for a moment or two and then investigated. It was a letter from Mr. Woodruff. He then went to the Post Office, where the club mail was regularly received, to speak about letters which he had found there. He was in quite a different strain and addressed "My dear Mrs. Howe." These missives were read to the jury by Howe's counsel, John Kelly and James Murphy.

She pulled out her watch, he says, to time him. At the expiration of the fifteen minutes he said she would give him two minutes grace. He made another demand for the letter.

She left him and began to pack her trunk. With this work she continued until 3 in the morning. He had to run a steamer down the lake the next day, and she insisted on being taken as a passenger, but he refused. On his return he found that she had arranged to have a guide take her to the railroad station. She finally succeeded in escaping, and went to Boston.

Howe declared that he had led a very happy married life until his wife visited Mr. Woodruff in this city. After she left Canada he followed her to Boston and made several unsuccessful efforts to get her to return to live with him. She once came back, and when he thought their differences had been allayed, she again left him. He told him that he had never intended to return to him, but had tried to make him condone her fault.

"You're a champ," she remarked to him, "and you've put your foot in it now."

Howe was being cross-examined by Lawyer Taylor, of the firm of Taylor & Parker, when the court adjourned until the morning. He was the only witness called during the day.

People in the Maine bar were said to regard the planet Jupiter as a magnificent incandescent lamp sent up into the heavens as an advertisement.

St. John's Lodge, in Boston, is the oldest lodge of Freemasons in the United States. It recently installed new officers at its one hundred and sixtieth annual meeting.

It cost $16,000,000 to maintain our army last year.

As there were no thirteen marriages in Haverhill, N. H., last year, the ladies are said to be objects of superstitious solicitude.

The court was crowded with people, many of them having come in during the morning from the district "around the corner," and the evidence much of which was of a highly sensational character, was followed with the closest attention.

The three prisoners are Mrs. Walter Evans, Charles Pegg and Geo. Oman, who were arrested a week ago on the charge of attempting to poison Walter H. Evans, husband of the female prisoner, and a hotelkeeper at Sharon, a village near Newmarket. They had been remanded without bail yesterday. Pegg was defended by Mr. Wallace Noyes, Oman by Mr. J. S. Fullerton and Mrs. Evans by Mr. J. L. Woodcock. The father of the female prisoner, an old, white-haired man, was in court, and at times wept bitterly, in striking contrast with the prisoner herself, who maintained her composure wonderfully well. Walter Evans, the alleged victim of the trio in the dock, was also in court, sitting beside his wife. He is a middle-aged man, with a mustache, and a few white hairs between his eyes. He is a native of Maine, and has been in the army for some time. He is a native of Maine, and has been in the army for some time. He is a native of Maine, and has been in the army for some time.

Margaret Reid, a domestic at Evans' hotel, at Sharon, was the first witness. She stated that Evans was taken to the hotel the day after New Year's day. Oman lived in the hotel. Evans was frequently away from the hotel during the day, but generally came back during the night. She had heard Oman and Mrs. Evans talking about Walter Evans. Mrs. Evans had spoken of her husband as a drunken fool, and had declared she would rather draw a knife across his throat than have him live a line across her name. Witness and Mrs. Evans were on very friendly terms. Mrs. Evans had told her she hated the name of Evans, and had asked witness to call her by her first name—Peg. She came to the hotel on the day after Evans was taken to the hotel. She had seen Evans and Oman in the parlor with a little bottle. Mrs. Evans gave him her pen-knife and Oman brought them some writing paper. They then made up three little bottles from the stuff in the bottle. Afterwards Mrs. Evans' father brought the female prisoner some bottles containing oil of cedar and lavender. Witness had seen Mrs. Evans' father drop the lavender in the bottle. On the arrival of the Magistrate Mrs. Evans was brought into court, and the proceedings were resumed. Crown Attorney Dewar appearing for the prosecution, and Mr. Wallace Noyes and Mr. T. J. Woodcock for the defense.

After John Kavanaugh testified (whose evidence was given in yesterday's issue), the next witness was Mr. W. W. Wilson, whose husband, Mr. W. Wilson, keeps a bake-shop in Newmarket. Oysters are kept for sale during the season months. It is the 2nd or 3rd of January a young man came to the shop and asked for oysters. They were in an old-fashioned two-part case. They had been selling right along, and had received no complaints about them. They used some of them themselves, both raw and cooked, with no ill results. Witness had suggested that he should buy some oysters, but he had been told by the man, who was at his own village of Sharon.

Mrs. Emily Brammer was then called. On the evening of January 2nd she went to the Evans' hotel about an oyster, and found Mr. Evans and Mrs. Evans and down the hall. The remainder of her evidence was simply corroborative of what has already been added in reference to Evans' first attack.

In this city, was out at Sharon for several days. On Tuesday or Wednesday, January 9th or 10th, he said, "I was staying in the kitchen at Evans' hotel, behind the bar, and saw a man and a woman. The man was Mr. Evans, and the woman was Mrs. Evans. They were both dressed in evening dress. They were both dressed in evening dress. They were both dressed in evening dress.

On Saturday, January 6th, he went to Sharon to see his brother. He was in bed, his wife was beside him, and he was in bed. He was in bed, his wife was beside him, and he was in bed. He was in bed, his wife was beside him, and he was in bed. He was in bed, his wife was beside him, and he was in bed.

Witness heard the doctor and Frank Evans, Walter's brother, mention "poison," and told Mrs. Evans that she was not white and said, "My God, they are not mentioning poison, are they?" She added, "If he had died before Saturday they would not have known it was poison. Mrs. Evans had suggested witness not to tell anything about her or Pegg or "this poison."

Witness heard the doctor and Frank Evans, Walter's brother, mention "poison," and told Mrs. Evans that she was not white and said, "My God, they are not mentioning poison, are they?" She added, "If he had died before Saturday they would not have known it was poison. Mrs. Evans had suggested witness not to tell anything about her or Pegg or "this poison."

leg officer." When Walter Evans first took ill Mrs. Evans had given witness a silver watch. When witness was leaving the hotel subsequently she asked for the watch. Mrs. Evans promised and got the watch. Mrs. Evans had also given her a ring on condition she promised not to tell what had happened. She said she had given the ring to her husband. The witness was cross-examined by Mr. Wallace Noyes, but nothing of importance elicited.

THE SALE OF THE POISON.

The first witness was Dr. Lewis H. Campbell, of Bradford, whose brother is the proprietor of a drug store there. He produced the poison book of the store, and showed two entries of purchases of strychnine by the prisoner Oman. The first of these was for 20 grains purchased "for force" on December 29th, and the second for 20 grains on January 4th. The last of these sales the witness said he made.

MEDICAL EVIDENCE.

Dr. Howe, Newmarket, who attended Evans in his illness, gave evidence as to the symptoms which he found in Evans' case. He first treated Evans for paralysis of the arms and legs, and the poison found would be consistent with the patient's having taken strychnine, but admitted that the symptoms might indicate exposure to wet and cold, would produce similar symptoms. An important part of Dr. Howe's testimony was to the effect that Mrs. Evans told him that she had been to the Evans' hotel on the day after Evans was taken to the hotel. She had seen Evans and Oman in the parlor with a little bottle. Mrs. Evans gave him her pen-knife and Oman brought them some writing paper. They then made up three little bottles from the stuff in the bottle. Afterwards Mrs. Evans' father brought the female prisoner some bottles containing oil of cedar and lavender. Witness had seen Mrs. Evans' father drop the lavender in the bottle.

TOLD HIS MOTHER ALL.

On the previous night, a little later Maggie Reid, in presence of Mrs. Evans, told Walter that she had seen Pegg and Lettie locked in a room together for two hours at a time. Mrs. Evans admitted that this was the truth, and that she was sorry for it. On Sunday, the 21st, Lettie's father and brother arrived, and the three had a long talk. After it was ended Lettie told witness that she was to have another chance, and that she was going to be a better woman.

Mrs. Margaret Evans, wife of Arthur Evans, of Newmarket, was the last witness. She described her deluge at the Evans' hotel, and the condition of her brother Walter. She said how Lettie had complained of.

THAT WALTER "BOSSED" HER.

In the matter of the medicine, and how, at Lettie's request, she, the witness, had given him a certain powder supplied by the witness. Water had at once been taken violently after this, his symptoms being the same as of the first occasion, only more aggravated.

This concluded the evidence for the Crown. On the advice of their counsel, the prisoners asked the court to adjourn until the next day, and the court granted them a trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction.

The development of the case has been in a very efficient hand. It is to John Hodgins, manager of the Canadian Detective Agency. When the matter first reached the ears of the Crown he was called in, and instructions were given him to investigate the condition of the case. He promptly did so, and on his report the warrants were issued for the arrest of the three prisoners, and the evidence of the case so far indicated that his work has been well done. The matter will be attended to before the final trial comes on.

A VETERINARY'S FATAL TREAT.

Three Men Drink Aconite Tincture For Whiskey.

LONG RACE TO A DRUG STORE.

One Victim Is Dead and the Others May Die—An Exciting Scene—Agonizing Sufferings Endured.

NEW YORK, Feb. — While entertaining two friends at his place of business in Roselle, N. J., last evening, Nathaniel H. Oakley, a prominent veterinarian, surgeon and livestock dealer of that place, gave aconite to them to drink, thinking it was whiskey. He took a drink of it at the same time himself.

Mr. Tracy, who was 60 years old, left Canada a few days ago to attend some business in this city, and before returning home visited Roselle yesterday afternoon to see his friend Mr. Wood. The two men, after driving around the village, visited the drug store of Mr. Oakley, whom Mr. Tracy wished to see. After a brief conversation, Mr. Oakley proposed that they take a drink, at the time taking to a closet in the office and coming from one of the shelves a bottle, from which he poured some liquid into three glasses.

The men, after an exchange of good wishes, drank together. Mr. Tracy and Mr. Wood drank the liquid without comment, but as Mr. Oakley emptied his glass he sprang from his seat exclaiming: "My God, we have drunk aconite! Follow me quick."

WILD RACE TO A DRUG STORE.

Barreheaded and without their coats, the men followed Mr. Oakley down the street, driving around the village, visited the drug store. Running into the store Mr. Oakley managed to exclaim:

"Don't, don't, quick. We've swallowed aconite enough to kill a dozen men," and then he fell to the floor.

Dr. Thomas and his son, Charles B., a medical student in Columbia College, carried the men into a rear room and started to work upon them. Mr. Tracy, owing to his age, showed most the effect of the poison. He lay on the floor, his arms and legs rigid, and he kept up a low, continuous cry of agony and fear, and for a time thought their efforts would prove successful. Mr. Tracy finally died.

Dr. Henry C. Pearson had arrived by this time, and, along with Dr. Thomas and his son, Oakley and Wood, the former 60 years old, by this time were apparently powerless, but by the use of strychnine they were revived somewhat.

THOUGHT HE WOULD BE THE NEXT.

Oakley, who had witnessed Mr. Tracy's attack, said:

"Doctor, I am afraid I will be the next to die, as I swallowed the largest dose of the stuff."

The two survivors were alive at midnight, but very low, and it was feared they would not live until morning.

Mr. Tracy's family in Canada was notified by telegram of his death. It appears that Mr. Oakley kept his whiskey and aconite on the same shelf, the only difference in the bottles being that the aconite bottle was labeled with the name of the drug, while the whiskey bottle was not.

The victims suffered great agony, it is said, and the sufferings of several men to be relieved. Mr. Oakley, who was a prominent veterinarian, surgeon and livestock dealer of that place, gave aconite to them to drink, thinking it was whiskey. He took a drink of it at the same time himself.

A BOMB IN A CAFE.

Twenty Persons Wounded in Paris by An Anarchist.

SHOT A PURSUING OFFICER.

"The More I Kill the Better I Would be Fitted"—The Bomb a Sardine Box Filled With Chloride Powder and Scrap Iron—Five of the Twenty in the Cafe Cannot Recover.

Shortly before 9 o'clock a pale, thin young man with a light pointed beard paid for a drink and he had taken at a table in the middle of the room and started to leave. When he had done so, he turned suddenly, drew a bomb from his coat and threw it toward a group of persons who had sat next to him. The bomb struck an electric light fixture, then fell on a marble table and exploded.

The great hotel and station were rocked by the shock. The mirrors, windows and doors were blown to atoms. The ceiling and floors were rent and the walls were cracked. A dense, offensive smoke filled the cafe for four minutes and in the obscurity the bomb-thrower escaped.

When the smoke cleared away five persons were found severely wounded and fifteen had slight injuries. The bomb had been thrown from the table, and the iron which had riddled the furniture and walls and inflicted most of the wounds.

SHOT A POLICEMAN WHO CHASED HIM.

After leaving the cafe the bomb-thrower started down the street on a run

DR. TALMAGE ON THE MANY EVILS THAT CHALLENGE CHRISTIANITY.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 1.—Singularly appropriate and impressive was the old Gospel hymn as it was sung this morning by the thousands of Brooklyn Tabernacle, led on by cornet and organ:

[illegible]

Nothing more impresses me in the Bible than the ease with which God does most things. There is such a reserve of power. He has more thunderbolts than He has ever flung; more light than He has ever distributed; more bliss than that with which He has over-arched the sky; more green than that with which He has emerald the grass; more crimson than that with which He has burnished the sunsets. I say it with reverence:—From all I can see, God

But as yet no easy God made the light.
He did not make him his arms; He did not even put forth His robed arm, He did not lift so much as a finger. The first out of which He struck the heavenly sun was the first of which He struck the earth.
Adam did not see the sun until the fourth day, for, though the sun was created on the first day, it took its rays from the first to the fourth day to work through the dense mass of fluids by which this earth was compassed. Did you ever hear of anything as easy as that? So much of it that it was not until the fourth day that the flowers, and warmth and light? Out of a word bounding a place for all the nations of the earth to warm themselves by.
Yea, seven other worlds, five of them in-

A Scottish clergyman told me a few weeks ago of dyspeptic Thomas Carlyle walking out with a friend one starry night, and as the friend looked up and said, "What a splendid sky!" Mr. Carlyle replied, as he glanced up, "Sad sight, sad sight!" Not so thought David as he read the great scripture of the night heavens. It was a sweep of embroidery, of vast tap-twenty-six hundred years before Christ was born. During the reign of Hohenstaufen, the astronomer was not so sure of his wrong calculations about the heavens. Job understood the refutation of the so rars, and said they were "turned as clay before the wheel." The pyramids were not so long ago built that Isaiah refused of them in his nineteenth chapter, calls it the "Pillar as the border." The fall of the sciences born was astro nomy. Whether the science was abroad, or from direct inspiration, it came to us David had wide knowledge the heavens. Whether he understood full force of what he wrote, I know not. Whether he knew his own mind, he would not let David know, but that truth; and therefore all the worlds the telescope ever reached, or Copernicus or Galileo, or Kepler, or Newton, or Herschel, or Fraunhofer, or our own Mitchell ever saw, were so easily made that they were made with the fingers. As easy as with your fingers you would not the wax, or the clay, or the don't the particular shade, so he decided the shape of the world, and he would weigh six axillion tons, and pointed for all the worlds their orbits, and decided their color—the white to Sirius; the blue to Altair, the yellow to Pollux the blue to Arcturus, the red to Antares, as the 2,400 decible stars that H. Schaler observed, administering to the whole of the variable stars by their glance he brighter or dim, preparing for the astronomer to see. He saw the stars, Andromeda, and the nebula in sword-handle of Orion. Worlds worlds! Worlds under worlds! Worlds! Worlds! Worlds beyond worlds! So many that a great astronomer was in the calculation! But He counted them as He made them, and He made them with His fingers! Reservation power! Suppression of Omnipotence! He made them, and He made them undetermined! Now ask for the benefit of all disaffected Christian workers, if God accomplished so much with His fingers, what can He do when He pleases? He can do more than He numbers all the batteries of His Omnipotence? The Bible speaks again and again of God's outstretched arm, but only once that in the text, of the bare arm

Now, just look at the enthroned dignitary in this picture. The removal of which would overthrow the whole system, requires the bare rights of citizenship. These rights are being wrestled with by the missionaries. I do not care whether you are an American, Brahmin, or Buddhist, Confucian, or a faithful Adherent. At the World's Fair, in Chicago, many nations were represented, and from India, to make themselves respectable, but the long hair and beards, and trowsers and striped robes of their representatives cannot hide from the eyes of the fair the fact that these religions are the most filthy and filthy ones in Japan, and the most filthy, and Genes Infanticide, and the Chinese shoe torture, and the aggravated massacre of many centuries. They are the same in India, or China, or Japan, or wherever they are. They are the same in our poor old world. I know that the missionaries who are the most murdering and Christ-like men and women on earth, are making steady and glorious progress in the world, and that the progress of the centuries. All this stuff that you see in some of the newspapers about the missionaries as living in luxury and idleness is promulgated by corrupt American or English or Scotch merchants, whose business it is to keep the missionaries rebuffed by the missionaries, and these corrupt merchants write home or tell newspapers and unsuspecting visitors in India or China of the darkened islands of the sea these missionaries are making their way to, and of the missionaries who, turning their back on home and civilization and emolument and comfort, are giving their lives to introduce the message of the Gospel among the down-trodden and heathen nations. These missionaries leave their families in America or England or Scotland, and stay for a few years in the ports of heathenism while they are making their fortunes in the sea or river trade, and then they come home, and are absent from home, give their children a degree of disinheritance, such as no pen of a heathen could, without the abolition of all decency, attempt to report. The presence of these missionaries in the world is a necessary household in those heathen lands, and constant rebuke to such heathen and infidels.

There, too, stand the missionaries. The Bible is the same in all languages. The Bible is the same in Korea, a book not much less than the New Testament, which was revealed to Mohammed when in ecstatic fits and raptures translated from their God, he dictated to his scribes. Yet it is said to day by more people than any other book ever written. Mohammed, the founder of that religion, a polygamist, with supererogity of the first step of his religion on the body, mind and soul, and the prophet who wonder that the heaven of the Koran is an everlasting Sodom, an infinite seraglio, about which Mohammed promises that each follower shall have in that place seventy wives, and that the prophet's wives he had on earth, but that no old woman shall ever enter heaven. When a Bishop of England recently proposed that the best way of saving Mohammedans was to let them keep their religion, and engraft upon it some of the principles from Christianity, he perpetrated an ecclesiastical joke, at which no man can laugh who has ever seen the tyranny and domestic wretchedness which always attend the rule of a religious tyrant. It has marched across continents, and now proposes to set up its filthy and accursed banner in America, and what it has done for Turkey it would like to do for our country. A religious tyrant, a woman-hater ought never to be fostered in our country. But there never was a religion so absurd or wicked that it did not get disciples, and there are enough fools in America to make a large discipleship of Mohammedanism. This corrupt religion has been making its state in the world for hundreds of years, and notwithstanding all the splendid work done by the Jesuaps, and the Goodells and the Ellices and the Van Dykes and the Foests and the Misses Bowditch and the Misses Thompson and scores of other men and women of whom the world was not worthy, there it stands, the giant evil, Mohammedanism, with one foot on the heart of woman, and the other on the heart of man. It is a monstrous blasphemy: "God is great, and Mohammed is his prophet." Let the Christian printing-presses at Beyrout and Constantinople keep out with their work, and men who profess to love God, and men who will until the Lord crowns them; but what we are all hoping for is something supernatural from the heavens, as yet unseen, something shining down out of the skies, something like the light which was the banner of the God of Nations!

How to Stop Nose Bleeding.

Obstinate nose bleeding is frequently one of the most difficult things to check. Several aggravated cases have lately occurred at the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. As a last resort Dr. D. Hayes Agnew tried ham fat with great success. Two large cylinders of bacon were forced into the nostrils, and the hemorrhage ceased at once. This is a very simple remedy, and one which should be remembered for cases of emergency in the country.

There are over 400,000 varieties of insects known to the entomologist, though not all described in the works on the sub-

"Why, I remember one case," said a judge, in relating stories of crime and criminals, "that haunted me for a long time. A fellow named Mullen was charged with the murder of his wife. There was a strong chain of circumstantial evidence. He had a gun, a bloody shirt, and a bloody knife."

"After his sentence the man's conduct was most peculiar. He refused to allow his lawyers to make an appeal, saying that he was satisfied with the verdict of the jury, and that he was content and that he would make no further steps to clear himself. He was calm and collected up to the very minute the trap fell. He had a minister visit him every day and he prayed with great fervor. He lay down to sleep at 10 o'clock, and on the morning of the execution he lay on the ground still down the street. He asked permission to make a speech and sat, standing there with the noose around his neck and with no passion or emotion in his voice, saying to the crowd that he hoped the executioner would consign him to the deepest of the earth, and that he would be glad to be the wife or had any part or share in her murder. He asked that the black cap be drawn over his face, and he went to his death calmly and with these words on his lips."

"Na," replied the judge, gravely, "we did not. Inside of a year we found two people who saw him go into the house just before the woman was killed and one witness, a servant, who saw the killing, but whom he frightened into silence. He was guilty. He knew he was guilty, and yet he lied and defied his Maker, when he was absolutely certain that his defiance would avail him nothing. I have never been able to make up my mind whether that was sublime courage or unequalled depravity."

The Hardships and Dangers Which Beset
These Sturdy Tollers—An Accident that Caused Years of Pain and Suffering.

Mr. James Fitzgerald, a prosperous and respected merchant of Victoria Road, a pretty little village in Victoria County, has for years suffered from the effects of a chronic ailment which he has been told is hereditary in a lumber camp. To a reporter of the Londonly Post, Mr. Fitzgerald said that when a boy in his teens he had a strong desire to go to a lumber camp, and he had been prevailed upon by his parents to let him join a party of young men who were leaving for the woods, fifty miles distant. It proved, for him, an unfortunate trip. One day he was working in a lumber camp when he blinding pole broke and he received a heavy blow on the elbow of the right arm. Since then he has been unable to do any work, and there was no surgeon within fifty miles of him. He was obliged to stay in the best of the place for several days, and he was obliged to leave his fellow-workmen could provide for a few days, thinking he was all right, went to work again. The exertion was much, for at a short time the spinal resources were exhausted, and there came a return, until at last Mr. Fitzgerald was forced to retire, where he got the care of care and medical attendance. This, however, did not relieve him, as the pain continued to increase, and he was afflicted with his whole arm, and partially affected side of his body. He thus suffered 17 years, unable to get any relief, his arm booming with numbness and paralyzed, and he was unable to do any work, and try to get a few light commercial garments and a cane, and he began to experience the beneficial effects. The pain from which he had suffered for so many years began to lessen. He procured another supply, and from that time he began to improve, and he was cured, and he did not only recovered the use of his arm, but in enjoying as good bodily health as he did before the accident, seven years ago. Mr. Fitzgerald feels that the cure was due to the use of the natural consequences is very warm in his praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have been the means of benefiting many others in his neighborhood, who had come to him for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he has seen many cases of partial paralysis, osteoarthritis, and all nervous troubles Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only certain cure. They act directly upon the blood and nerves, thus striking at the root of the disease, and restoring the vitality of the entire vigor. Sold by all dealers or sent at paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y.

It is a fact that the circulation of these unscrupulous dealers may often increase the larger profit from their sale.

Enamel the Bath Tub.
When the zinc or tin lining grows shabby it is a coat of white paint. After this is dried apply several thicknesses of white enamel, waiting for each application to dry for coddling the next. In this way a thick enamel coating is laid upon the metal, giving it the appearance, when completed, of porcelain. The enamel-lined tub not only very much daintier in appearance, but can be kept in order more easily as zinc or tin, a damp cloth wiped across the surface being all that is needed to retain a purity of coloring.

Jimmie's Ambition.

"Well, Jimmie," said the visitor to the call son of the entomologist, "are you going to be a lawyer when you grow up, or not?" "I'm going to be a Bogwump like pa," said Jimmie.

LUTETIA AND HER STATUS.
A statue is to be raised to the honor of Midia. Dequency, a prodigess of the Comedie Francaise, and yet there is no statue to Rachel. Therefore the members and the people may remember that it has no statue. Racine, and none to Corneille. A statue Madame de Sevigne is about to be raised. Now there is to be one to Madame de Staël. At the first of these two will be the more alarming subject. Madame de Sevigne could be shown at her moment of immortality, lovely and rather wearily gay, and a mother of a daughter. The moment of immortality varies.

MUZZLING A SPENDTHRIFT.
There was quite a flutter of excitement at the Palais de Justice a few days ago when a certain Wolfsoch Bonaparte, an eminent

A WITLED HERMINE.

Silvide Vallant is at the present moment most interesting child in France. The number of persons who have offered to support her or to contribute towards her maintenance and education, since her father's death, is a record for the printing press. Her father, a Jew, called the Chevalier Dupont, has become truly embarrassing. A wealthy, charitable, and always generous Duquesne Dubouché d'Ussé was the first to come forward with a practical scheme for her education. He offered to pay for her, if, when she would call unfortunates, were it not for the reflection that, under circumstances in which she was being brought up, nothing so fortunate could be expected to happen. He was, however, when she removed her from the care of her father. Madame d'Ussé, being asked as a fervent Catholic, as well as a member of society, foremost that her initiative in such a matter would raise the suspicion of the Socialists, all Frenchmen, however, she, took the precaution to say that she did so, while receiving the benefit of the aid to be raised for her, should be educated according to the views of a family of the name of Vallant. The members of the Vallant family gravely discussing whether Silvide would be led astray the Catholicism or not must have seen some snail in the proscriptory as well as the revolutionary views of the Vallant-Germain which the revolutionists are so often contrasted with the old or mid-18th century.

HENRY GAY MOTHER IS AMERICA.

Madame Vallian—the legitimate one, mother's mother—means, moreover, to have been left out of the reckoning. It is said that her husband took her over to the States, and, having started her upon a career of dissipation, returned alone to Europe. When she hears of all that is being accomplished on behalf of her daughter she may ask it worth her while to come back and share the part of a mother. The Socialists serve that no precautions would suffice to remove Sidonians from the danger of a reverse education if the "certain" Deoband put only a finger in the pie. M. Glavin gives the Socialist Deputy and poet, he who repels the generosity of Madams d'Uxelles by another still more generous, the one he proposed to adopt Sidon's little daughter. The Madam du Peuple is almost obliged to adopt SKONs; a solution which will provide her with many fathers, all of whom would be above the suspicion of religious tendencies. Other proposals will doubtless be made, for the future of Sidonian children has become a very great question that occupies much space in the newspapers every day.

THE "very latest" in Parisian entertainments partakes of the "acute" conventional. It took place only a few evenings ago at the hotel of the Comtesse de Chastelaine, on the boulevard Magesme. The invitations bore their conclusion these words: "On xénisme;" Anglice, "There will be a vacillator," and in response to them a large number of the most aristocratic and fashionable monde in Paris assembled at mid-light. The gentlemen were red dress coats and had bare arms. The ladies were in heavy ball dresses, but every one of them had a little aperture in the skirts, on the side of the leg, intended for the passage of the vaccinator's lancet.

and his adversary's sword had cut his rumbustious gaiety prevailed throughout

ROBBING A ROTHSCHILD.
A clever pickpocket has succeeded in robbing Baron Ar-hur of Rothschild of his purse containing $3,000, which fact is confirmed by all Paris to be deserving of the most careful investigation. The thief is well known that members of this famous family never carry sums of money of any importance about with them, for the reason that they are generally left unattended. That Arthur Rothschild, however, is now doing with so large a sum about him is a mystery, for a Rothschild never needs money, and it is probable that the thief had been watching him for some time, and when the money hit his pocket, and then have decided to rob him. Baron Alphonse told the story of how he was robbed one night at the Hotel de Kildare, and how the thief could not be found, in a Parisian paper. There must have been some digestive tablets, powders, a watch key and a list of private addresses he wanted to write during the next day, and he was so busy that he did not know as he was so certain that the thief could not possibly make head or tail of it. Old Baron Alphonse used to say that he never feared thieves or burglars, because they never attacked poor men.

IN THE opinion of some people here the Rubes family in the Rue des Martyrs would be the most fortunate of the city. The happy couple and their grown-up daughter, appearing together apparently in any circumstances, occupying rooms for which they had paid only a few francs a room of nearly $20, having plenty of their own furniture, and, besides them, including pictures that could hardly have been turned into money, manage to get the best food there is to be had in the city. The day after the day when the rent falls due without being able to pay it. The thought of the comers' part of the cost of the gossip that would follow the little family's disappearance, and in which the news would run up and down the street, was more than these stolidly responsible people could bear. Rich, poor, and all, they were to be merry first, and drink and be merry first. Accordingly they sat down to a very satisfactory dinner, including a recolat and some delectable coffee and coffee and the comers' cafe a bottle of champagne was opened and the servant was told to go up to the roof and not to come down until he was called.

He waited so long he was called the worst creature that the most impatient and careless of us in spite of the order. By that time Mr. and Madame Dubois and their daughters were quite exhausted, and the only living creature that was left in the room was the French maid who had thoughtfully kept up in the next room. The French have always been excused for their horror of falling into debt as it will be seen that when it is combined with the necessity of supporting a family they may have deplorable consequences. The extreme respectability of these people was shown in the strong repugnance to the idea of selling any of their goods and the desire to do so that they had. Another characteristic trait: they put on their best clothes before they lay down to bed, and Madame Dubois, to brighten the effect, ordered her maid to come in and wash her face philosophical way of going out of the world when the landlady cannot be paid! The French was of another way of thinking than we. He fell into the same difficulty; but he was not a philosopher of the code of the French.

A Flock of Ostriches.
Twenty-seven ostriches which were shown at the World's Fair at Chicago, and attracted many visitors, have been brought over to London, and are now on show in the Royal Aquarium. They are from an ostrich farm in Colorado, where, as well as in South Africa, ostrich farming is now a cash industry. The flock includes birds of various sizes and of varying value, coming worth $1,500. Their heights range from six to ten feet. Great, naked, hungry-looking birds they are as they peck about the sidewalk and scratch at the grass. The male birds are not so readily to come to each other, and it is most amusing to watch a pair of these ungaily birds doing at each other like levitating gooses.—London Graphic.

Mr. Alex. Speers, Griswold, has now in his possession, recently imported from Owen Sound, one of the best bred horses in the country. The animal has three fine strains, all of the fast trotting kind, in his make up, including the Hambletonian, and has made, though but little tried, some very fast time himself. If practiced, we are confident he would give some of the fleet ones a little more to do than they are capable of doing. Mr. Speers, of course, paid a fancy price for his fine animal, and may keep him for service.

There is something like a healthy row amongst the W.C.T.U. people. (Mrs.) Dr. Yeoman has issued a leaflet termed "Warning words," for use in certain cases, and many (Clergymen included in the number) consider it obscene. To the mind of the most advanced educationists there is too much of a mandarin sentiment prevalent. The young are not taught enough of nature and the ways of humanity, and the persons who break in on usage, with the best of motives in view is certain to be attacked by the endorses of usages as they are. Of course much care must be exercised in urging a new departure, but none the less for the benefit of humanity there is a great necessity for not some to take the initiative in reform.

The Summer Death Rate.

The greatest evidence of the dangers of Cholera, Malaria, Diarrhea, and Dysentery, is the increase in the death rate of all the leading cities during the summer months. Men and women cannot be too careful of their habits of life during the heated terms, and particular attention should be paid to the diet of children. A supply of Burdock Blood Bitters should always be at hand, for it is the only medicine that can be relied on at all times as safe, sure and speedy. A teaspoonful will cure any ordinary case but in severe attacks it is occasionally necessary to bathe the sufferer's stomach with the Pain Killer. All reputable druggists have it for sale. 25 cents price per large bottle.
